Dear Gary,

The handwritten Griffin memo on where the buses go is very interesting.

You may recall I went into this in one or both of the first two books. There is a Secret Service report that I had or didn't get but saw, where Kelley had asked for such a study, where they had the maps, etc. I am certain this is in reference to Earlene Roberts' statement she last saw LHO waiting for a bus.

My recollection is that this document proved the bus from that stop went only in the opposite direction, not toward LO and Patton.

Once they learned this, they had to forget it or the whole thing came apart. So, they forgot it.

This is one of the items I intend using in AGENT OSWALD where I expect to go into frameup.

Griffin might have asked if the bus available at that stop goes to or connected with a bus that goes to near the movie. He didn't. He cannot be that unbright.

If you get anything more, I'd be interested. If I find this document, I'll send you and Paul copies. If I made the best guess, it is that I saw this when I was holding back on every one of the few pennies I had for what seemed of most immediate need and then forgot. Another case of this is in the WF file, the Secret Service study for the Commission of announcements in the papers about the motorcade. It did not give them comfort.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
